Introduction to Adlerian Play Therapy
MPTI Virtual Boot Camp
Wednesday, August 4, 2021 1:00 p.m. to 4:15 p.m.
Amy L. Holsinger PhD, LPCC-S, NCC, RPT-S

Training Description:

In Adlerian play therapy (AdPT), therapists use the concepts of Alfred Adler’s Individual Psychology to conceptualize children while using toys, art, play material, and metacommunication to connect and communicate with them. The process of co-creating a relationship with the child through play allows therapists to communicate in a way that facilitates exploration of the child’s patterns of thinking, feeling, and behaving. This training will explore the 4 phases of AdPT and provide an overview of interventions that can be used during each phase. Using a case study, the presenter will provide an illustration of AdPT in action in the playroom.

Training Objectives:

1. List and describe 4 basic concepts of Adlerian theory.
2. Describe each of the 4 phases of Adlerian play therapy.
3. Explain the Adlerian stance on being directive sometimes and nondirective other times in play therapy.
4. Describe 2 play therapy skills used in Adlerian play therapy for building the relationship with a child client.
5. Explain at least 1 strategy for exploring the child’s lifestyle.
6. Define metacommunication and explain at least 1 Adlerian play therapy technique used in helping the child gain insight in play therapy.
7. Describe 2 Adlerian play therapy skills used in the re-education/re-orientation phase for teaching the child new patterns of feeling, thinking, and/or behaving.
